

Romanian Ambassador to Japan meets with members of the Division of Earth and Planetary Sciences

On August 5, 2026, H.E. Dr. Ovidiu Alexandru Raetchi, Ambassador of Romania to Japan, visited Kyoto University and met with Associate Professor Bogdan Enescu and members of his research group in the Division of Earth and Planetary Sciences.

During the informal meeting, the participants exchanged views on research and education in Earth sciences, disaster prevention, academic life at Kyoto University, and opportunities for further academic exchange between Japan and Romania. The Ambassador also engaged in a lively discussion with younger members of the research group.

The meeting provided a valuable opportunity to strengthen connections between the academic communities of Japan and Romania. It is hoped that such exchanges will also encourage more students from Romania and other countries to consider studying and conducting research at Kyoto University.

Photo 1. Group photo with the Romanian Ambassador to Japan and members of the research group.

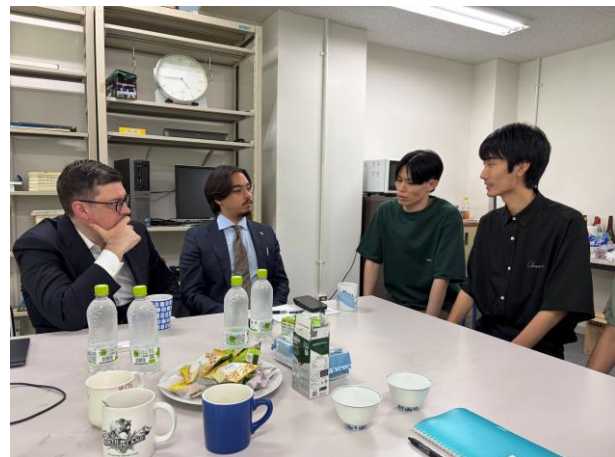

Photo 2. Informal discussion between the Romanian Ambassador to Japan and members of the research group.